

Spain's fuel cycle company Enusa announced yesterday that it has recently signed a partnership agreement with nuclear equipment manufacturer Equipos Nucleares SA for the provision of services in the field of used fuel management. It said that through the agreement the two companies - both units of state-owned industrial holding company SEPI Group - will offer "an integrated service package in a market with growing demand in the management of used fuel in Spain, Europe, China and elsewhere."